

Know Your School Board Candidates: North Penn School District

As you know, the primaries are coming up on Tuesday May 16. This year, school board elections are more important than ever. We stand with candidates who put kids first, commit to being transparent, and do not bring ideology or culture wars into the classroom.

Before you cast your vote, read the information we have about your candidates.

In North Penn School District, 5 seats are up for election and there are 10 candidates running. This year, almost all of the candidates are cross-filed as both Republican and Democrat, which can make it harder to understand their platforms. We hope this email helps clarify where the candidates stand.

Elisha Gee, Tim MacBain, Julie Ramic, Kunbi Rudnick, and Cathy Wesley are running under “North Penn Neighbors for Progress.”

- Here’s a snippet from their website: “We are the Democratic candidates running for re-election to the North Penn School District Board of Directors. Through our innovative and progressive leadership, we are guiding the school district toward a brighter future. With your support, we will continue to provide steadfast, fiscally responsible, and transparent leadership for the entire North Penn community.”

Mike Jowder, Ismaine Ayouaz, and Vince Alteri are running under the slate “North Penn United.”

- Vince is associated with the national conservative organizing group Moms for Liberty, as he posted on his Facebook page.
- According to The Reporter, candidates Diana Blystone and Liz Vazquez were also associated with the North Penn United group as recently as last month.

You can read more about Moms for Liberty’s radical education agenda here.

The stakes could not be higher for our students. Thank you for putting kids first this election season.

Happy voting!
